Check that this is current. Details change. If something looks out of date, confirm it with a trusted contact before acting on it.

Keep this private. Private details were left out of this copy. Store it somewhere secure and shred old copies.

This is not a will. It is practical guidance, not a legal document. If there is a will or other legal paperwork, it takes priority over anything written here.

Start here

If you are reading this, something has changed and you may be carrying a lot right now. This plan was written to make the next days and weeks a little easier.

It collects the practical things that usually live in one person's head: who to call, how the household runs, where important papers are kept, and what can wait.

You do not need to handle everything at once. Very little here is urgent. Start with the "Immediate actions" section, then take the rest one step at a time.

The people and professionals listed under "Trusted contacts" were chosen because they can help. It is fine to lean on them.

This plan is guidance, not a legal document. A will, trust, or other legal papers take priority over anything written here. If something is unclear, ask one of the trusted contacts or a qualified professional.

Focus on the next necessary step. That is enough.
